

Find an Icebreaker for Your Adult Group

Use the filters to find a starting point from our activity library. Recommendations use simple rules about the setting and format, not personality predictions or measured group results. You can change the choices without creating an account.

A paper selection worksheet with common settings and sample choices.

Start with the occasion

Choose friends, an adult gathering, a team, or a new adult group. Read the selected deck before inviting others.

Choose a format

Two people can use a willing pair activity. A small circle can share one question. For more people, offer smaller groups or an observer option.

Leave time to close

One question can fill a short opening. Suggested times are plans, not measured results. Stop when people are ready.

Try a concrete starting point

New colleagues: new team icebreakers. Book club: spoiler-free book club cards. Language partners: language exchange prompts. A shared fictional task: cooperative story cards.
